The 1992 Mirror

Bates College

Lewiston, Maine 04240

Volume 84

The time you have spent at Bates College constitutes the formative years of your life. College prepares you for the endless challenges you will face in the upcoming years, and you will look back on your college years with fond remembrance forever. The Mirror would like to invite you to look back on the past year and help you reminisce on all your years at Bates. It's the tradition of a yearbook to put together a book providing information about the past year and we have worked hard to present this edition to the graduating seniors and the Bates community at large; to create a memento of life at Bates College 1991-1992 . . .

Wait a minute, has anyone in your four years here ever talked to you like that? The yearbook staff is attempting to bring tradition into this yearbook for 1991-92; however, many of the most untraditional aspects of Bates are those that deserve the most attention. How many colleges do you know of where the president comes to breakfast every morning? Our professors lecture in jeans and we all eat in commons together. Where else on Earth could you Blue Slip a bulletin board? We want to help you remember the special parts of Bates, the little details that have inevitably contributed to your years here.

So we've established that this black book will bring back many fond memories of professors, President Harward and many of the little things about Bates — but back to tradition, what's a yearbook for? "Obviously" you might answer, "it's to look back on my years at this fine institution." We layout; senior pictures (to show in later years and embarrass your college friends), candids (to depict our exemplary student body in context), copy (endless paragraphs you'll probably never read unless miserably bored or sentimental) and advertisements (a last good luck from Mom and Dad or some wonderful establishment that helped pay for all this). You might still wonder, what is all this for?

Let's consider this, for some the year will be completely clear; however, for others there might be some blurring. Let's be honest now, can you really recall who was what at the CHC Halloween Party — do you even remember who you were? What about Clambake, wasn't it a tad bit chilly this year? Who was that band during Winter Carnival — was there really a beach in the Cage? Or maybe the seventy-two hours around thesis deadline are a little fuzzy, and you could use help to remember what you were doing in the days following. We understand, that's why we're here . . . and so we present to you the Bates College Mirror for 1991-1992, we hope we've been of some help.

Fall is a time of leaves falling with a crisp chill in the air. Well this is how I always knew fall to be before I spent it in Maine. This year fall did not seem to come until October, I remember wearing shorts well after we came back to school from October break, but later it started to cool down and we felt the great fall chill in the air. It seemed as if one day it was glorious and warm out and the next day we had snow. Sometimes I am not too sure I am going to be able to deal with Maine weather.

However, despite Maine's weird climate there were many activities that went on during the fall of 1991. Some of these activities included sports. The Bates students were able to watch football, field hockey, men's and women's rugby, men's and women's soccer, women's volleyball, and I am sure there are a few I have forgotten. The fall sports season was exciting as the women's volleyball and women's soccer teams had amazing seasons. Art activities also played a large role during the fall including the play "Line", a modern dance performance and numerous coffee houses. Some special events that took place during the fall included parent's weekend, alumni weekend, and countless great parties.

Finally, the most important thing that occured last fall was that all of us returned to the world of academia after the summer, a time of sun and laziness. We all came back to Bates.

It just wouldn't be fall without carving pumpkins for Halloween.

Clambake 1991

As is tradition, the Bates Outing Club held its annual Clambake this fall. With the sun, Outing Club crews came out to set up the grills and nets for the many Batesies longing to escape campus. They had all the food, from hot dogs to lobsters, ready to be eaten and the beach was soon covered with many people hoping to stop the inevitable winter months quickly approaching. It may have been a little windy, but to our Maine winter veterans it was still summer at Popham!

Everyone turned out in shorts and some even braved the freezing waters. While others had heated games of frisbee or volleyball, or even tried to tan. However, when the food was ready, the secret seeped quickly through the beach population. In a matter of minutes, lines ran back through the parking lot and everyone was demanding his/her lobster. After the famous and renowned Outing Club cuisine, it was back to the beach for more fun and excitement before the bus ride home.

The Clambake is the perfect opportunity to enjoy all kinds of sports:

risbee, beach volleyball, nerf football, sand castle building and here, kayaking.

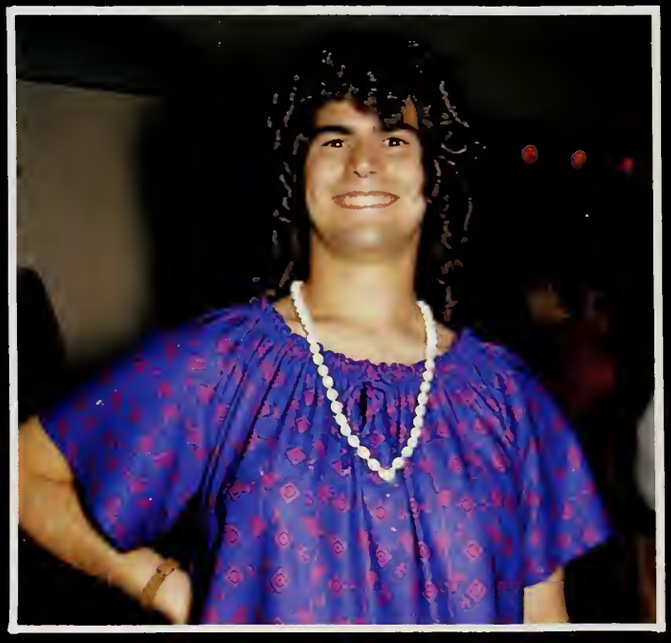
Jesse Loesberg gets sucked off into the wild blue yonder, and gives new meaning to the concept of "Go fly a kite."

Witches and Goblins and Ghosts, Oh My!

The Chase Hall Committee Halloween Party was one of the first big events of the year. Amidst bogus Nostradamus predictions of mass murder at a small New England college, with an L-shaped building (or was it T-shaped), near a lake or a cemetery. We originally heard it was supposed to be a Catholic school and the mayhem was to occur at midnight — or whatever fits the school of your choice, since the tale was molded to fit most schools on the east coast. Thankfully there were no mass murderers or serial killers on the loose, and most of the people were having too much fun to really think about it.

The CHC set-up crew illuminated Commons. The back entrance was ensconced in blackness, while ghastly ghosts and goblins glowed to create the mood. Upon passage through the back doors, two large screens acted as DJ's as videos flashed across one entire end of the room. There was a range of creations including; social butterflies, bad pick up lines, a variation on the Seven Dwarfs, a few six packs of beer, super heroes, gypsies, clowns, crayons, and almost anything else the imaginations of our fellow students could dream up. Thanks to the hard work and ingenuity of CHC the whole night was a big success.



Well, there's just no accounting for some people's fashion taste. The pearls are a nice touch, though . . .

This year's Halloween guests included Hans and Frans, the muscle bound megamen, the Howard House Crew as mass-murder fiends and teen idol, Aaron Belinfanti, as himself.

Heroes in a half-shell!
We knew that Campus Cutters was bad, but this is ridiculous.
Blondie and Joan Jett rock out with their favorite pick-up line: "If I told you that you had a great body would you hold it against me?"

Volunteer Spirit Is Spreading

It was a Saturday morning and you were wondering how it was possible that you were up at eight o'clock; you couldn't remember the last time you saw the sun that early on a weekend. However, you soon recalled what had brought you out that early in the day and then you forgot about how much more you would have liked to have been back in your bed. You were up that early so that you could help someone build their house or spend time with less fortunate children or help teach swimming lessons. You were a volunteer. However, not all volunteering took place at eight o'clock on a Saturday; different people were giving their help at any given time, and indeed much time was given.

Volunteering at Bates College is an activity that is definitely growing. With the addition of a volunteer coordinator to the Bates staff in 1990, volunteerism has seen new organization and new programs. It would be almost impossible to list all the different programs and individual activities in which students participate. However, the list would have to include activities that range from working with battered women to children to homeless people to those that are illiterate; a wide scope of worthy causes.

In addition to the regular volunteer programs at Bates, some special projects took place. The largest of these was called Into the Streets which was run during first semester. The event was a weekend long stint of volunteer projects which lasted for a few hours. The idea behind Into the Streets was to encourage students who had never volunteered before to experience what it can be like. Over three hundred students gave some of their time and hopefully because of the positive results the program will be continued in the years to come.

Celebrate Seniors!

By this time we've finally repressed the college application process, most of our acne, our freshman year, and the D in calculus. Still on our minds are the Gulf War, the Berlin Wall, Tiannamen Square, the dissolution of the Soviet Union, the S&L Crisis, the NEA, Andrew Dice Clay and 2 Live Crew, Pro-life, Pro-choice, the dissolution of apartheid, and El Salvador. Here at Bates we've seen a new president, men in underwear wandering around dorms, rapes, Take Back the Night Marches, B. B. King, Bucky's Family, Mark Lunt, Safewalks, bagels, cranberry juice, ice cream machines, Anna R. Kissed, Angela Davis, and chopped down campus trees. How things have changed, my. I can't remember the whiny shrew I was when I got here — I'm sure some people from my orientation hiking trip do. I hope she's behind me for good.

Bates gave me a healthy ego check and a receipt for $100,000. Now I'm all better. Those six free health center sessions helped, too. I'm finally sane and leaving.

It's been four years since the senior class of 1991-92 first walked into their respective new student centers. Just what have you all been doing for the last four years? Undoubtedly you have lots of memories and in your time there have been many changes. Hopefully you have learned a lot and now you are popping the Bates Bubble and heading out into the "real world." You all have witnessed the growth and change of yourselves, your friends and your school. If you look back into your green mug books you might not even recognize the passport photos and candid snapshots of those people who are now your friends. What did you think the first time you thumbed through the collection? Can you even find yourself? Have you met people you never thought you would?

There are places throughout campus and Lewiston that you will not soon forget. The Goose and the Cage will remain fondly in your memories (possibly somewhat vague at times), as well as, Mount David — our seemingly hidden little hill or the Puddle. When you are speaking to someone who is not a Batesie you might refer to the Bill, the den, Nothing but the Blues, or the E-room and get a funny look — because these places are definitely novel to our campus. And who could forget Freeport and the Auburn Mall?

Bates is also a different place from the school you entered. During your academic career here you have witnessed the opening of such buildings as; Lindholm House, Carnegie Science and the Cage (both new and improved). You have even seen the inauguration of a new president.

IN MEMORIAM

August 1, 1969-
October 18, 1990

In the last year we have witnessed changes in both the faculty and administration of the college. There have been impressive new additions to many departments and we have sadly said goodbye to others. Despite these changes, as always, the Bates faculty has remained among the best in the country.

Valuable additions have been made to many of the academic departments this year and many are still looking to expand. There have been campaigns to vary the range of expertise in such departments as Psychology and Geology. We have said goodbye to Dean Carl Straub, our former Dean of Faculty and have welcomed a new Vice President for Academic Affairs and Dean of Faculty, Martha Crunkleton. These changes and shifts only exemplify Bates' continuing attention to the school's natural need for growth and change, and the college's high standard of excellence for all faculty of the school.

BATES COLLEGE

Extra-curricular activities play a very important role in the lives of all Bates students. These clubs and activities are a meaningful addition to everyone's academic life. Our clubs range in diversity from political to athletic, from social to religious, and all these help create the myriad of events on this campus.

Campus organizations do everything from sponsoring parties to taking us out into the woods. They organize sales for things to hang on our walls and blood drives to help the community. We are educated and informed through lectures, articles, table mail and displays in Chase Hall. Thanks to club sports we can be; active, in shape, muddy, scrum, wet, checked, coxin, all on land, sea or ice. The variety of opportunities leaves something for everyone, and helps to enrich all of our Bates lives.

Bates supports many strong varsity and junior varsity programs for the student body. Sports are an integral part of life at Bates as is evident through the enthusiastic participation and support of us all. The Bates Bobcat stands for the fighting spirit in our teams, both varsity and JV, which we see in our season statistics. Our strong rivalries in the BBC spur our players on to excel, as do our many competitors in NESCAC and our other opponents. This year, not only our players but our spectators as well, showed exuberant support through the new Pep Band. They helped fans cheer for our teams on our fields, in the gyms and in the water.

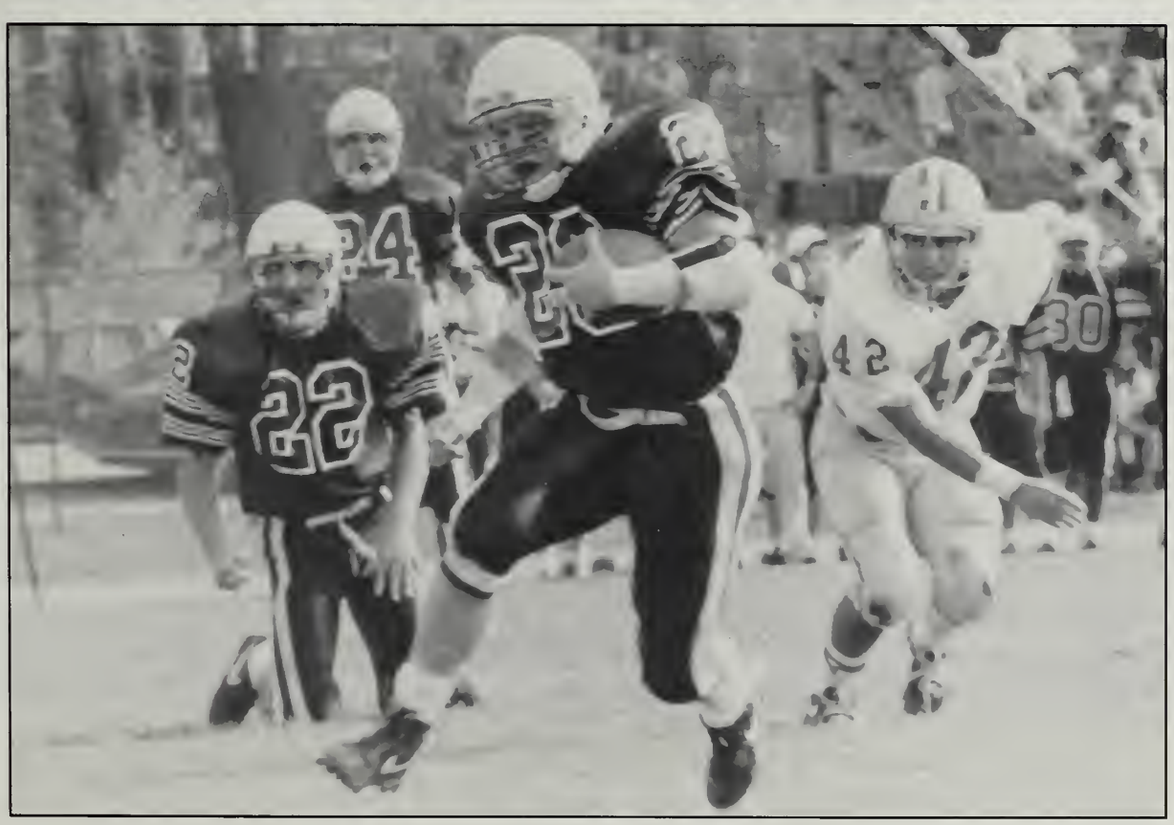
A TRIBUTE TO

Web Harrison has served as Head Coach for the Bates Bobcat football team since 1978. This season he announced his intention to retire from this position following the 1991 season. Web's tenure as football coach is the third longest in Bobcat history. Web, himself, is a 1963 graduate and football alumnus of Bates. After graduating, he went on to pursue a career as a Marine Corps officer, which included a tour of duty in Vietnam. He entered coaching in 1967 as an assistant at Boston University, where he was defensive coordinator from 1970 to 1972.

Coach Harrison returned to Bates in 1974 as assistant to head football coach Vic Gatto. When Gatto resigned in 1978, Harrison, the associate head coach, was named acting head coach. Web became permanent head coach at the end of the 1978 season, the same year he received votes as New England Coach of the Year.

Web has also been head coach of the men's lacrosse team at Bates since 1977. He was honored as Coach of the Year by the New England Intercollegiate Lacrosse Coaches Association in 1984 and was a finalist for national Coach of the Year honors that year. Web will remain as head coach of Bates men's lacrosse. We would like to honor his time and dedication to the Bates Bobcats football program, 1977-1991.

WEB HARRISON



It was a Friday night and as I sat in a dorm room trying to decide what I wanted to do that evening I was astounded by the many different choices of performances that I could attend. I could go and see the orchestra or see a play or go watch a hard rock band. In high school the options that I had for a weekend night only included seeing a movie, hanging out downtown or going to a party at the house of whoever's parents were away. Although there was theater and concerts available, the price of the tickets was always more than I could handle. However, now I am at Bates College and it seems that every time I turn around there is another play, music concert, dance show or band to go and see and usually the most expensive tickets are only three dollars. There is no doubt that the arts at Bates are excellent and frequent.

There have been numerous different performances during the 1991-1992 year. Some of the different plays that have been presented include The Clouds, Line, Bucky's Family, The Unsilencing, The Peasant From El Salvador and still others. There have been numerous orchestra, jazz band, and new music concert performances with the latter being only composed of pieces written by Bates students. Additionally, there have been too many coffee houses to ever count featuring musicians from inside and outside Bates and the groups, such as the Merrymanders, the Deansmen, and Side Effects. All three of these groups also managed to find time to put together their own shows which highlighted their work. Finally there have also been dance performances, performance arts pieces, and other activities that have kept us all entertained.

DE LA SOUL came to Bates during the Winter Semester.

This small section entitled "The Lighter Side" would probably more logically be called Short Term. It is hard to think of anything at Bates that typifies something like a lighter side more than the month of May where Bates students seem to be outside in the sun more often than they are in class.

This section is supposed to embody time spent on campus in purely non-academic pursuits. Whether it be enjoying a picnic in the quad, trying to have a coherent conversation at a party, or just playing volleyball at an Outing Club Clambake, these types of memories should also be included in this book. It is not by accident that most of the following pictures are from Short Term. When it comes right down to it, most of the "lighter" social events and memories are a product of Short Term. However, this is not to say we do not have fun during the rest of the year. There are also photographs from both the Fall and Winter semesters.

At Bates it is said we both work hard and play hard. The following photographs are the "play" pictures.

That Was Then . . .

This is Now . . .

A great deal has happened to us over our past four years at Bates. President Harward was inaugurated, new buildings sprouted around us, a few professors moved on and new professors joined us. We came to recognize the significance of difference and diversity installing the Women's and African American studies majors. Students established the Bates Asian Society and Solidaridad Latina, two organizations among others that support students of color and enlighten and educate our community. In 1988 our freshman basketball players promised us that they would play in the ECAC playoffs and as promised this year they arrived, achieving the finest record this school has ever seen. Our women's soccer team has performed tirelessly over the past few years bringing us to the ECAC tournament twice in previous years and this year we won it. The women's lacrosse team has been ranked nationally this year. Three of our starters have been invited to the North South Team, a spectacular honor and we are very proud.

In addition to these moments of utter glory and success we have also traveled through disturbing times. We have lost friends and colleagues and we have felt their pain. We saw our Country go to war and watched members of our campus go to fight and go to protest. Some of our sisters have been abused and raped and have suffered tragically more so than we may ever know. Students have experienced forms of racism and homophobia leading to feelings of immense frustration and isolation. There has at times been a resistance to understanding and appreciating difference, in accepting one another for our different cultures and backgrounds. We struggled in listening to one another. Some students and faculty have worked with unrecognized disabilities and perchance when we should have been supportive we unknowingly increased the pressure. There are members of our community who were quiet, unseen and unheard. Even as we look around tonight at this filled room we notice that the chairs for our staff remain unoccupied. Our very representation as our community remains incomplete.

It is critical that we acknowledge these distressing concerns and demanding periods of our lives just as we feature our seasons of triumph and moments of joy. we have earned the right to recognize our growth through the tumultuous, and what conceivably appeared to be, the de-stabilizing storm.

When I reflect back on our times of crisis I wonder if perhaps we were too hard on ourselves. Too insistent that we find pragmatic solutions to quandaries that have spanned lifetimes. I wonder if we needed to undergo failure, to struggle in bridging our dissimilarity, to wound our resilient souls and to grieve, so as to prompt us along the road of self discovery. As students each of us has watched ourselves and our friends begin as one person when we entered this college and now depart as another. We have grown into people we never knew we could be, people we did not have the foresight to understand or to appreciate.

In these last few days we all become sentimental. It is exciting because we students are moving on to the next phase in our lives. It is stressful and frightening because we are leaving our community behind. We ask ourselves what happens next? What about the life we've spent the past four years building here, all the relationships we're involved in, all of the hours of academic work, where does it all go?

Well there are some we will keep in touch with over the years and some that we won't. Bates too will continue to evolve and transform in the coming years. When I think of change at Bates I think of my parents. Both of my parents went to Bates. Although my father has been able to keep up with the recent events of the college my mother is still baffled with how different the campus looks and how much has changed since she graduated in '65. In the spirit of such change she gave the following advice when I was trying to decide on the college I would go to four years ago. She said, "You know Anike I was not happy at Bates. But I do believe it was a good experience for me to have gone to school there for the same reason I think it will be a good experience for you to study there. If you do decide to enroll at Bates it will be a meaningful experience because you will never get to be a part of a community quite like that one ever again." Her words seemed too laden with contradiction for me to understand her back then. It is with humility and hindsight that I am able to understand her now.

Over the past four years here we have grown into a family. We do not always get along with our respective families, in fact quite often we do not. We may be up all night in an argument with our siblings or caretakers where painful things have been said to the point of no forgiveness but not surprisingly we still say good morning the next day. We may have wondered how do we share a history when we have so little in common, we may have felt on the outskirts of the inner circle of our relations, and we may have wished we would have been extended family to our nuclear family. But we did not forget because we could not forget that those folks called our families were indeed still our families. We here at Bates college are a family. We are connected by a thick skinned temper, a village wisdom, an appreciation for the polish on the small parts that insure the achievement of the greater whole. It is insignificant whether or not you know me. It is not of great consequence that I may not know your name because I believe that what I do not know about Bates you know; that what I have not seen at Bates you have seen. I may not know what you have given to Bates and what Bates has given to you. But you know, you know and you remember.

My family, I urge you to hold steadfast to those memories. Remember those caffeine ridden nights you stayed awake deep into the wee hours of the morning because you intended to cram for an exam the following day only you spent most of the time talking to a stranger, but a member of the community, in all night study or in your dorm lounge. Remember how it felt to have your thesis advisor spend three hours with you in a meeting, not because she had to but because she cared about your work. Professors, we may not have been in the room with you but we are aware that you may poured over a lesson plan for too long when you may have even questioned whether you should be spending the time with your own children. Please remember the student who came to you during office hours startlingly pleased or angry but indeed impassioned about the subject matter you discussed in class. Students reflect on your artistic, literary, or scientific contribution to our community. Think of the mathematical equation that you put so much time into solving. Think of those moments of efficient and instinctive drive on the playing field, the magic you experienced between you and your teammates in playing well. Remember what it felt like to be told that insisting on being called a woman was ridiculous, and think about how someone must have felt when they tried so hard to tell you that the academic curriculum may not reflect an inclusive history. Students recall the most important skill our teachers taught us, the infinite power of intellectual inquiry. We learned this as we watched some of our professors take the time to read new works in order to teach a more inclusive curriculum. Think of the pride we felt when we saw our President make himself so available and visible at our artistic, sporting, social, and political events. How even he must have felt to see "Roon" spell out the B-A-T-E-S at every single basketball game.

As a family we move beyond the notion of respecting one another. As a family we watch out for each other. Friends I urge you to look out for one another over the next few days. I am sure we students may experience feelings of confusion, fear, and elation as our respective friends and families reclaim us and we move forward in the direction of new beginnings. We will need support from our brothers and sisters to sustain our faith in the time of transition.

On behalf of the students I would like to thank the staff, professors, and administration for not only providing an extraordinary work space, for your educating, and managerial skills but for demonstrating courage to teach us as your full person. I am sure there were times we were difficult to teach. We may have been quick to accuse, misunderstanding your greater vision in the interest of the family. You have taught us compassion, strength, and humanity by giving us the freedom to grow through disagreement and to accept the fact that we are joined together by our different perspectives. There were moments we could not reach each other because of our different backgrounds or political beliefs. Even in those predicaments through our conflict we students were challenged to examine our beliefs and insights and rely on our own resources. We were empowered and in turn we empowered our peers.

In these last few days let us stride proudly in our power. Let us believe that although we may not have achieved all we set out to achieve, although we may not have understood all we thought we should have understood, although we may not have been all we expected ourselves and others to be, let us believe that the path toward a confident future is through faith in the trail of knowledge in our past. We are indeed the proudest of families. We prevail because we know where we come from, we prevail because we believe our lives have had significance in this community, and we prevail because we are confident we will each give to the world in our own time and by our own design. We cannot help but prevail because we know that when it comes to family, our relations can never leave us.

Although the following section is not always the most important to Mirror readers, it should be. Without the advertisements included in this section mainly from generous businesses in Lewiston and Auburn that the Bates community patronizes, the yearbook would not be published. Therefore, we are all obviously indebted to the individuals and businesses that support the Mirror financially.

Compared to recent years, advertising was quite difficult to solicit this year because of the ongoing economic recession. Not to mention that we had to raise the costs of advertising because of the substantial increase in publishing costs. However, despite the economic downturn and the rise in the price of advertising, many patrons continued to support the yearbook and the class of 1992 even though many of these businesses' finances have been strained. Donors to this year's book are all loyal patrons and we hope that you, the reader, will continue to use our advertisers' services.

The photographs for these two pages introducing the advertisements section were taken by Sarah Spangler '94 who has been doing a Short Term independent study in the art department photographing Lisbon Street here in Lewiston. Sarah's photographs seemed appropriate to start off this most important section of the book which insures that a yearbook will be published annually at Bates College.

THE MOST FUN YOU CAN HAVE WITHOUT A PILOT'S LICENSE.

It isn't only the clean, businesslike driver's environment that conjures thoughts of a jet fighter's cockpit. Nor is it merely the powerful rush of the largest engine ever mounted in a Saab (excluding our jets, of course).

It is the feeling of total control that the Saab 9000 Series delivers, an exhilarating oneness of man and machine.

It's a feeling far more easily appreciated than described. Appreciate it for yourself at your local Saab dealer soon.

Approximately 300 members of the Bates community gathered outside of Chase Hall last Friday to express their outrage for the verdicts in the case of four Los Angeles police officers charged with assaulting motorist Rodney King. The rally focused on the racial issues raised by the case and subsequent rioting in Los Angeles and other major cities.

The 1992 Bates College Mirror

It is now finally May 26th and at last we, the yearbook staff, can finally see the light. As usual, this book has been a daunting task. From extending the senior photos deadline over a dozen times to missing the Students' group picture more than once — it would be an understatement to say many things were a struggle. This could be the reason no seniors wanted to apply for the editor's job last year. This left Anne and myself, both sophomores, the leaders of this 1992 Bates College Mirror.

Although our staff seemed to get smaller day by day, this year a remarkably dedicated group ended up sticking it out until the end. Because I was away in the fall enjoying Japanese sake and the famous Japanese hot springs with a few classes mixed in for intellectual stimulation, Anne developed a theme for the book and assembled a team together to produce the 208 page book she planned.

I cannot thank all the staff members that helped to put the pile of photos and papers in the Mirror office into this book, but a few people I am personally indebted to. Anne always had that uplifting smile on her face and never lacked a good idea for a page or section. Anne kept us all motivated and even got us stationery! Meredith, the copy editor, should not have been given such a confining title. Meredith was a copy editor, a layout editor, and a friend all at once. Frannie and Mary had a tough job searching for advertisements this year, but they did their best and always were willing to lend a hand. Finally, there is Ellen. Yes, we did have one senior on our staff! Photo editor is the most time consuming and difficult job on a yearbook. Ellen not only took every assignment we gave her in stride, but she always delivered her professional photographs with humorous notes attached to them to cheer us up. Ellen, you became a friend to all of us and we wish you every success in the future. Don't worry, you will never be compared to past editors. They will be compared to you.

Now that all the thank yous and serious stuff is out of the way, we present to you the 1992 Mirror. We gave it our best shot. Hopefully, you are pleased with our final result. If you are not, in the words of our photo editor, "Fire us, beat us, make us feel cheap — we beg forgiveness of you, kind students and the judges that be." — Mark and Anne

SPECIAL THANKS TO

Harvey Bell

Gene Clough — Gene is as always responsible for many of the best color shots in the yearbook. Gene never failed to call us up when he had something we might be interested in. Gene should not only be recognized for his contribution to this year's yearbook, but to all the ones that came before.

Rick Dennison — We want to thank Rick for all the photographs that he let us use in this book. Rick is a top notch photographer who is always willing to help us out of a jam even though he may have many other projects in the works. Without Rick, the sports section of this book would not have been possible. What can we say, but thank you and we owe you one.

J. Cole Harris — Cole not only represented the Taylor Publishing Company, but he worked for us. From budget proposals to rule lines on layouts, Cole was always there willing to help. Without Cole's expertise, kindness, and tolerance, this book would never have come into being. We look forward to working with our friend Cole in 1993!
